Maya

Introduction

The Maya of Mesoamerica, along with the Aztecs of Mexico and the Incas of Peru, made up the high civilizations of the American Indians at the time of the Spanish conquest. Both the Aztecs and the Incas were late empires (about ad 1300-1533), capstones of a sequence of civilizations in Central Mexico and the Andes in South America, respectively. But the Maya of Yucatán and Guatemala exhibited a cultural continuity spanning more than 2,000 years (1000 bc-ad 1542), and many aspects of their culture continue to the present.
